Product Management Leadership Forum
for technology-based products

www.productfocus.com

"An exclusive workshop focused on leading and improving product management in your business."

What is it?

For product management leaders in companies with technology-based products.

Through a series of workshops and discussions this forum will

- explore how to build a high-performance product management function
- give you the tools, knowledge and support you need to lead a world class team
- give you an opportunity to discuss the issues that matter with peers and industry experts

Is it for you?

If you're like many product management leaders, you're very busy with day-to-day operational work. There's little time and support for working on building a high-performance product management function.

The Forum provides an oasis away from the usual daily distractions. It gives you the dedicated time and space to focus.

Why a forum for product management leadership?

Product management conferences are a good source of new information. However, you can often spend a lot of time passively listening to people presenting. Or you can find yourself grouped with a mix of people from all levels whose jobs are completely different to yours.

This exclusive Forum is for product management leaders. Limited to 20 delegates it has a high degree of participation and discussion with peers who are facing similar challenges.

This Forum gives you the dedicated focus and expert support needed to improve the product management in your business.

Leadership Forum for technology-based products

What are the benefits?

- Explore how to build the value of product management to your business
- High quality peer-level discussions and learning in small groups
- Insider perspectives from peers and product management experts
- Space and time to uncover insights and discuss the issues that matter
